SENATE GETS TIP

Measure Even Though Not Satisfactory.

BURDEN ON CONGRESS

If It Sees Fit to Adopt an Unwelcome
Measure It Must Answer to the People. Said to Be Stand of Chief Executive Has Taken in His Fight.By United Press.
WASHINGTON, April 26.—Vague assurances have been given in the Senate cloak room that President Coolidge will not veto the tax bill adopted by Congress, even though it does not conform with the recommendations of Secretary Mellon, who was learned to-day.

While these reports lack any official weight, they have been accepted as an encouragement for the Senate to go ahead and adopt a tax measure it.

Mr. Coolidge is represented by those who assist to speak for him as relying fully upon Congress to set the financial policy of the government.

Congress must take its record to the people in the coming election and if it sees fit to adopt an undesirable tax measure it must stand responsible for it, the President is said to have told his friends.

A 25 per cent reduction in taxes this year is assured, his friends say, because even should the President veto the tax bill, a resolution declaring a 25 per cent reduction on all taxes will be rushed through. Such a measure would be in line with the President's expressed wishes and would assuredly receive his signature even if the main tax bill would be vetoed.

Meanwhile the Senate today rushed through the tax bill giving its approval to sections about which there was no objection from either side of the chamber. All controversial features were passed over to be thrashed out later. The surface rates will be the last parts of the bill to be taken up.

Evelyn Nesbit
Blocks Path of
Thaw to FreedomBy United Press.
PHILADELPHIA, April 26.—A motion for a new trial in the case of Harry K. Thaw, who is seeking to gain his freedom from Kirkbride's Asylum, was filed in the court of common pleas here today by Evelyn Nesbit's attorney, William A. Gray.

The motion was filed at the decision of Miss Nesbit to further oppose Thaw's possible release from the asylum. The action of her attorney here today will prevent Judge Mandan from signaling the sanity verdict for Thaw's relief brought in in the case just closed.

As a result Thaw will have to remain a patient at the asylum until the motion has been acted on. It is declared likely that this decision will be made within a week.

Miss Nesbit's action blocks at the last minute Thaw's path to freedom. He had hoped to be in Pittsburgh today. He was expected instead to urge a flat increase of $300 for clerks and carriers.

The report of the subcommittee probably will be submitted to the full House and Senate committee the first of next week.

AMERICAN LEGION GIVES
BRILLIANT EASTER DANCE

Connellsville society was well represented at the annual Easter dance of Milton LaFayette Bishop Post No. 203, the American Legion, held last night in the State Armory. The affair was given under the chairmanship of Ira Moon, chairman; Alfred Ridge, Louis M. Cago, William McNulty and Thomas W. Davidson and not the slightest detail in arrangements was overlooked. The dance was a wonderful success and was one of the prominent social functions of the post-lenten season. About one hundred and forty couples were in attendance. Guests were confined not only to the young set, many of the older folks being their interest in the event by their presence. Those who cared not to dance spent very enjoyable evenings at cards, several tables for bridge and set-back being called into requisition. Mrs. J. McGehee, Mrs. William Dull, and Mrs. A. D. Solson had charge of the card room. Prizes were won by Mrs. Charles Detwiler and Mrs. A. D. Solson.

Dancing commenced at 8 o'clock and was kept up until 1 o'clock and a most enjoyable time was had by all. Excellent dance music was assured for the occasion. A marked feature of the dance was the decorations, the infectionary having been concealed in a bower of roses beauty. The colors were purely patriotic and formed a striking background for the many beautiful gowns in evidence. A color scheme of red, white and blue was carried out in a most effective manner. Streamers of the colors were draped from the central light to parts of the hall and arranged about the orchestra members, who were stationed at the lower end of the hall, was an attractive canopy. An artistic arrangement of large lamps, large American flags and ferns added effectiveness to the scene. The softly shaded lights cast a soft glow over the dancer and never did the auditorium present a more brilliant appearance. During the evening refreshments, prepared by the American Legion Auxiliary, were served. The patrons and patrons numbered nearly one hundred. The committee in charge, as well as all others who assisted, deserve great credit for the untiring manner in which they worked toward the success of the dance. Many out of town guests were present.

ADDRESSES YOUNG MOTHERS

Reddinger Studio

Hudson, Pa.—"At my young motherhood I was in a frail, delicate state of health, my back ached, I had bearing pains, my appetite failed and I became nervous and generally weak. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and favorite prescription (which I took reluctantly) relieved me of all weakness and distress and strengthened me in every way. It was a turning point in my life; I changed from a frail, thin woman into a strong, robust one, for I gained permanent good health and never again had any sort of weakness afterward. I have never forgotten that it was Dr. Pierce's medicines that did all of this for me and that is why I recommend them to other women who are in a frail, nervous state."

Low Waistline Used on New Paris Models.

The nomad waistline, always a diversion for the French couturier, has wandered farther afield than is wont in this season of the simple silhouette, says a fashion writer in the New York Tribune. Indeed, in journeys in some instances have yet entirely effaced it from the costume. Yet on one point all Paris is in accord—the waistline cannot be an natural.

The higher line bears an impudent list of grommets. There is Jeanne Halie, who has rounded the Directoire theme in her frocks—her models feature various treatments of the high waist, including some rather bizarre effects. On one frock the waist is high on one side and low on the other—another dress shows a high line in front and an extremely low one in back. Martial et Armand have also succumbed to the appeal of the Directoire—they're in a waistline typical of that period, almost unrecognizable at the back and markedly high in front.

This effect is achieved through the adroit manipulation of embroidery, cut bands and draperies. Chiffon, whose slim silhouette and short skirt require only the merest suggestion at the waist, has moved the line perceptibly higher than on her models of last season.

POULTRY

TRAP NEST TO TELL PROFITABLE FOWLS

One of the principal objections to the trap nest generally employed where individual records of hens are desired is that too much time is required to take the hens out of the nests and record their achievements, says Orange Judd Farmer. Many farmers and poultrymen who would like to know which hens are profitable and which not, in their flocks, will therefore welcome such a nest as pictured herewith.

As will be seen, the nest is an ordinary box. The front is provided with a very light door made of a shingle or other light wood, and swings on a pivot from the top. Near the middle of the right-hand side is shown a little bar, pivoted where it touches the door, toward the lower end of this little bar is a notch, which as the door is lifted engages on the latch on the side below.

When the hen enters to lay her eggs she pushes the door and disengages the latch and removes the door and disengages the latch.

MOTHERS

AND THEIR CHILDREN

Don't Stress the Task.

One Mother Says:
I find that my children are more willing to do little tasks about the house if I do not stress the fact. The task should be simple enough to keep up all your toys," I say. "As soon as you've picked up these toys, we're going for a walk," making the task to be done a more safe issue. I always try to show something beyond the task itself.

SENSATIONAL SPILLS IN ENGLISH RACES.

The Orpheum

"CIRCUS DAYS"—in which Jackie Coogan, famous child actor appears, in the leading role and Jackie Phillips, impersonator of the famous little star, appears in person, provides splendid entertainment today at the Orpheum.

"Toby," as played by Jackie, runs away from the farm of a harsh uncle and gets his job as a circus pony merchant at a dollar a week and "Toby." His unexpected leap into fame as the hit of the circus comes when he is permitted to substitute for the little equestrienne who had sprained an ankle. "Toby," he hadn't intended to achieve success in just that way, but he is content with the happiness it brings his widowed mother and the little equestrienne.

The strong cast that supports Jackie includes: George Tannant, Russell Simpson, Gladys McDowell, Cesare Gravini, Dorothy Jackson, Sam De Grasse and Do Witt Jenkins. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, Conway Tearle, Lon Chaney and Dorothy MacKail will be seen in "The Next Corner."

It is generally conceded that the gentlemanly jockey races in England are run on the hardest courses horses can negotiate. That, and not lack of horsemanship, is responsible for the numerous falls so often pictured on English tracks. This photograph shows Prince, the horse in front, and his owner, D. B. Barnes, a favorite for the 886th time in the Guards' Challenge Cup at Hawthorne Hill, England, while Arpawa, in the rear, is about to fall.

"It was pretty gaudy, stranger. Have a drink."

Dinsdale shook his head and reloaded his gun.

"Just walking around a bit. I'm going."

He passed to the door, his hands at his sides. French Curly wished he carried a second derringer as did San Juan Jon, but in his heart he knew he would not risk a shot had he had the extra gun.

This episode, more spectacular than tragic, added to the reputation that Dinsdale was acquiring. From resort to resort the story was carried that night, and by morning the "greenback man" was the principal topic of conversation among all classes. The story of his prodigious treble of losses and gifts in the following until it was suitably concealed that it was a source of his wealth. At the least, was conjectured.

The morning also found something new added to the widely gaudy gossip and was based on his encounter with Bandy Allen in the L. X. L. hotel. With the usual exaggeration it was loudly bruted about that the two men had parted with the understanding they should begin shooting on sight when next they met. For several days Allen had been drinking heavily. He was a type that loves nothing of deadliness because of liquor. The more he drank the more quiet he grew. There was no doubt as to his making threats against Dinsdale a few hours after the scene in Kene Frank's place.

The two did not meet and now it was morning and the entire town was expecting them to settle their feud before sunrise.

Near noon Dinsdale appeared on the street, apparently as fresh as he had been in bed all night instead of three hours of sleep during the forenoon. He visited several dives without carrying in any. As he was leaving a gambling tent a disheveled creature followed him and warned:

"Watch out for that Bandy Allen. He's here to get you.""Thanks. Run away."

And the fellow stumbled to a store especially at the greenback in his gaudy paw.

In the afternoon following the lively night at Kene Frank's he was accosted in front of the Grand Central hotel by a graved-faced man, who rapidly said:

"Your name is Peter Dinsdale. I am mayor of this town. Mayor Farnum. I must talk plainly to you, as you are a young man. I hope you're more foolish than dangerous.""Shoot, mayor. I'm both young and dangerous, but never dangerous to Mayor Farnum."

The mayor frowned at the affluous and beautiful words and advised him:

"This town is not a good place for you. Back in Cheyenne or Denver, my."

Dinsdale's smile vanished.

"Is that an order for me to get out?" he sharply asked."No; not an order. Simply some good advice. Affairs have been run rather loosely here ever since the big rush commenced, but conditions will soon change. When they do, men of your type won't be wanted. Already

Progress of Motordom Ignores Logic

Manufacture, Sale and Use of Automobile Most Amazing Example of Unhurried Progress—Cross Purposes of Various Interests Without Rhyme or Reason—Motor Industry Floundering About in Unaccountably Successful Way.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN

AUTOMOBILE To those who find diversion and profit in analyzing trends in business and customs, and in making predictions as to probable future developments, the entire range of motordom offers an entirely new and interesting group of subjects for discussion. Everything from the industry to car ownership is on the threshold of a new development, and the student of the situation finds himself reaching some rather startling conclusions.

One manufacturer has already made the statement that he would like to be the only independent motor car maker in a market that was represented by a monopoly, which represents his subtle prediction that the automobile business cannot be strangulated by powerful combines.

It is openly confessed by some that automobile, and particularly trees, are giving entirely too much service while there is just as much valid in favor of increasing car sales by making cars just longer.

The cross-currents are covering the country to such an extent that one cannot rely upon the judgment of even the most experienced manufacturers and experts on automotive subjects. The motorists can only review the facts and reach any conclusion that strikes his own fancy.

No one knows how the various trends of the moment are going to work out and this is further complicated by the fact that those who might be expected to shed light on some of the more important problems of the moment are skillfully keeping out of the picture.

The average motorist who has heard a lot about the used car problem and who has bumped into it up (Continued on on frequent occasions, may perhaps be surprised to learn that the very manufacturers who are dependent upon the continued popularity of the automobile and the briskness of sales have done less to relieve the situation than the motorist himself which is saying very little.

The automobile dealer, through his local and national organizations, has been fighting a lone battle with this perplexing problem and he is rapidly coming to a realization that there is something vitally wrong with an industry where the manufacturer and retailer do not pull together.

At a time when motor manufacturers are, at least temporarily, prosperous, automobile dealers are complaining about meager profits, and in many instances big losses. Yet nothing appears to be making any attempt to get together. Meanwhile the motorist looks on and imagines that it is none of the business wherein the stability of the automobile industry and the smooth functioning of sales has much to do with the price he pays for cars and the values he receives.

Though the increasing number of accidents has served to act as a sales resistance for the past several years the motor manufacturers, through a committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, have just taken up the work of making the highways and streets safer for motor travel.

While one group of motor manufacturers are aiming to make their products so standardized and so enduring that the public will turn to them eventually for economical and sound transportation another group of equally clever auto barons rush

HERE is a wealth of meaning in the phrase "Just a Real Good Car." In it are incorporated the ideals of W. C. Durant's thirty-seven years experience as a manufacturer of vehicles as a builder of more than two million fine automobiles.

As honestly and skillfully as they were able, master engineers have combined the qualities of design, construction, equipment, and performance that time and the public have proved to be most desirable.

The modest and appealing slogan "Just a Real Good Car" is W. C. Durant's own description of the result, the first motor car ever to bear his name.

The record production and sale of 110,000 Durant Cars in the first two years indicate continued public approval of ahead with a number of radically new speed. They can't try any innovations in the piano because it is a standardized thing the world over. All the manufacturers can do is to try to make better pianos for less money.

If a piano didn't have 88 notes, three pedals and standard keys, no manufacturer would touch it yet there is no law covering the subject. And no manufacturer would care of the popularity of a product with 65 keys, each painted a different color. Yet here are the automobileists of the country planned to drive any car, regardless of whether its controls are altogether different from those of the particular car they claim they know how to handle.

All the while the motor vehicle authorities take space to announce how strict they intend to be, the manufacturers go on making cars that can travel faster stop quicker and speed with less commotion.

City authorities worry a lot over the increasing number of fatal accidents, yet noting the increasing congestion instruct the traffic officers to urge motorists to speed up. Cross purposes at every hand, and yet the automobile rapidly advances into a position where it is not only indispensable but far more useful and interesting than it has ever been before.

Wheels are now a sort of compromise between convenience, comfort and necessity. Wheels have recently become smaller in diameter as a means to increase resultant power and facilitate tire changes, but now they are bursting longitudinally into balloon tires, and if a car were to appear with six wheels or three the world would be ready to proclaim new possibilities for the automobile.

Compared with the piano industry the automobile will be like an overgrown dinosaur bursting with desire for an opportunity to display its

Man's Conquest of Time

The progress of mankind, from the earliest recorded ages, has been marked by a ceaseless struggle against the limitations of time and space. Civilization is mutual interchange of thought and the product of thought. This interchange demands transportation, hence the development of civilization has paralleled the improvements in transportation.

A useful lifetime should not be measured in hours lived, but in deeds done. Doubling man's productive capacity offers the same net result as doubling his period of usefulness or doubling the number of producers.

More than any other single factor of civilization, the automobile has multiplied the producing power of man, by decreasing time and distance, and by providing a broad and flexible means for the transportation of men and their products.

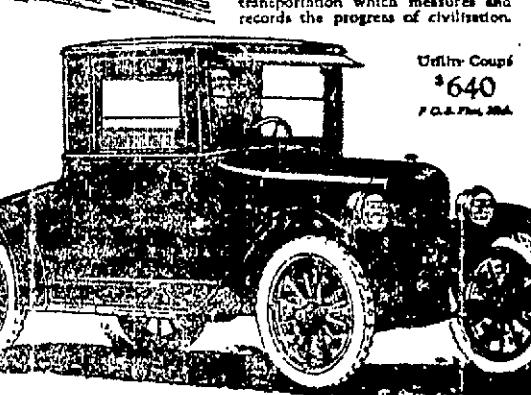

The amazing growth of the automobile industry could not have been, had not the automobile more than justified itself as an economizer of manpower, a stimulator of production and a creator of wealth.
